

I do believe the reflections for each assessment have challenged me to think about the real-world ethical and social impacts that various coding projects may have. The plane ticketing assignment specifically challenged me to consider more security systems I had not considered before. I expect to encounter security issues in my career due to the ever-evolving digital space the world is moving towards. I don't believe there are many questions the class did not ask. Overall, I was challenged by the questions posed in the assessment reflections.
